No Ordinary Man

Reflections for Good Friday
on the Person of Jesus

Nick Fawcett designed the meditations which make up our production to put us into the shoes of those who knew Jesus best. Each is written from the standpoint of an individual whose life was influenced by him - his disciples, his friends, his enemies, those who were challenged by him, troubled by him or inspired by him.

The events underlying each meditation are not described as they are happening then and there, but as though the character in question is looking back, trying to make sense of the events they were part of. And always the underlying question is the same:
 How do we make sense of this man Jesus?
 What does he mean for me?

What a day it was!
 Why did he have to spoil it all?
 We were there to celebrate Passover
 We were there in the upper room

 John

He was scared
 He was broken-hearted if you ask me
 Thirty pieces of silver, that's all it took
 To be perfectly honest, I thought he'd run for it
 Oh God, what have I done?
